Principal Research Areas

Spanning late-colonial to early twentieth-century Brazilian history, Hendrik Kraay’s research has focused on five connected areas:

Popular Festivals in Nineteenth-Century Brazil: Funded by a 2015 SSHRC Insight Grant, this ongoing project examines the changes in pre-Lenten celebrations in nineteenth-century Brazil, including the repression of rowdy and “barbaric” entrudo and the emergence of “civilized” carnival. It focuses on both the forms of celebration and the discourses about appropriate public comportment and representations of the nation in these festivities. A monograph on these celebrations is in progress.

Civic Rituals and Commemoration of Independence in Brazil: Funded by two SSHRC Standard Research Grants, this project focuses on how nineteenth-century Brazilians of all classes in Rio de Janeiro and Salvador (Bahia) celebrated their country’s independence and debated the nature of the Brazilian state and membership in the nation through these commemorations. The results of this project include Days of National Festivity in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, 1824-1889 (2013) and Bahia’s Independence (2019), as well as numerous peer-reviewed articles and book chapters. A third monograph, on the twentieth-century Dois de Julho festival (the commemoration of independence in the state of Bahia), is in progress.

Military History of Brazil: Research in this area focused on the social history of the armed forces in independence-era Brazil (the subject of Race, State, and Armed Forces in Independence-Era Brazil [2001]), military recruitment in this slave society, and Brazil’s participation in the Paraguayan War (the subject of a 2004 coedited book). Nova

História Militar do Brasil (coedited, 2004) was a pioneering work in the new military history of Brazil that remains in print and continues to be widely cited by scholars in the field.

Slavery and Afro-Brazilian History: The primary focus of this research area has been the participation of free, freed, and enslaved black men in nineteenth-century Brazil's armed forces, including the recruitment of enslaved men for service in the country's nineteenth-century wars. Afro-Brazilian Culture and Politics (edited, 1998) examined the interaction of culture and politics in Afro-Bahian history, while more recent work has focused on slave culture and the manumission of "white" slaves. The results of a collaboration with Adriana Barreto de Souza (Universidade Federal Rural do Rio de Janeiro) on the history of the late-colonial militias that enrolled men of color will be published in a forthcoming edited book.

Popular Politics in Nineteenth-Century Brazil: Through the analysis of civic rituals, popular royalism, Afro-Brazilian participation in Brazil's independence movement, and rebellions, publications in this area demonstrate that the nineteenth-century Brazilian lower classes included numerous politically active citizens. Their political engagement profoundly shaped Brazilian independence and the imperial regime (1822-1889). The current focus of area is a biography of Francisco da Silva Barros, a man of color who left a diary in which he recorded what he considered important in his personal life and in the public life of the city of Salvador, capital of Bahia, from 1809 to 1828.
